Pick a useful little mission

Try one. Talk, draw, sign, point, type or ask someone to write your exact words. You can ask for help, rest, keep your work private or stop.

- Day 31 · What is the whole?
- Day 32 · Thirds and quarters that mean something
- Day 33 · Fifths and tenths for a useful plan
- Day 34 · Fractions between zero and one
- Day 35 · A fraction guide someone can use
- Day 36 · A question worth making a table for
- Day 37 · Every record gets counted once
- Day 38 · Counts of counts
- Day 39 · A table that helps its reader
- Day 40 · Your tiny maths help desk
- Your own empty fraction guide · all its words
- Your own empty data table · all its words
- Ordinary models and complete no-image choices

A model is someone else's example. Your own blank page is for your idea. A helper can do a physical action you direct; your maths choice can still be yours. Choose safe familiar paper or described objects with a grown-up.

Original SubjectNest educational words and presentation: CC BY 4.0. Full source, legal, font and no-image companions are embedded. Keep their separate terms with any edited copy and mark changes. Supplied examples are models; no learner result is implied.